ONLINE HARMS

The internet and technology provide us all with immense opportunities. It is a world in which children become immersed from a very young age, but as with all aspects of life there are positives and negatives. When you consider that almost any behaviour can be enacted online it gives an indication of the scale of potential online harms.

During this packed but enjoyable day, delegates will look at some quite diverse areas, all of which reflect the real online lives of children and young people and learn::

- What do we mean by online safety and online harms?
- How do we differentiate protecting children of different ages?
- What is risk and show to simplify this with the 4 C's – Content, Contact, Conduct and Commercialism.
- The main areas where we find children and young people online explore their motivations, the risks and issues (the 4 C's), and of course the positives too

There will be discussion around a number of risks including child sexual exploitation and sextortion, commercialisation, algorithmically-driven content wellbeing as well as considering how and why apps and games are designed to keep us there and much more. At the end of the day, Delegates will come away with a much better understanding of the online lives of children and young people, the potential risks they may be exposed to and the appropriate advice and guidance in order to support children and young people in your care.

PORNOGRAPHY, YOUNG PEOPLE AND CHILDREN THE IMPACT OF THIS TYPE OF CONTENT ON GROWING BRAINS & BODIES

This training / workshop is suitable for anyone working with children or whose children have discussed, viewed or sent this kind of material, practitioners who have been called to deal with this issue in schools, homes or other settings. In fact anyone who knows children!

With the prevalence of Pornography on the internet alone (It is suggested that approximately one third of the online space is dedicated to this material) it is highly likely, if not almost guaranteed that children and young people can be exposed to this in many of their social media accounts, video platforms and of course the gaming spaces.

They will undoubtedly hear sexualised language and curiously google this information, only to land on sites, searches and spaces where this material is for over 18's, inappropriate, extreme and often violent.

During this packed and informative training, facilitated by an expert in the field who has over a decade of experience working with these issues with children as young as 5, delegates will:

- Learn about what pornography children and young people see, what the harm, influence and issues are with viewing this material
- Hear anonymous case studies and examples to provoke discussion
- Discuss candidly, openly and frankly about the issues children and young people face with this material and the viewing of this whether this be once off, repeatedly or problematic viewings.
- Learn about the vulnerabilities of websites and what this may mean for children's cyber safety and security going forward.
